Parliament Will Be Asked to Give Jurisdiction to Department of the Marine-May Abolish Line Houses.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL REPUBLIC SPECIAL.

Ottawa Ontario. Nov. 11.—One of the first things that will be done after the Dominion Parliament meets will be to pass a law giving the Department of Marine Jurisdiction over inland vessels. Everyone was surprised when it was found the department had no jurisdiction over the conduct of those vessels or the owners, and if it had not been for the loss of the Minnedosa this fact would probably not have come out for years. The jurisdiction of the department extends to occan-going vessels only; why, no one seems to know, but the defect will be remedied as soon as possible.

Some time ago several transatlantle vessels carrying grain foundered through the or other the inland versels were not included.

One thing in connection with the great lakes which the Minister of Marine and Fisheries means shall be stopped, if possible, is poaching by fishing vessels. This subject will be brought to the attention of the joint Waterways Commission.

It is thought that if the practice of poaching is continued, with almost inevitable accompaniment of firing from cruisers, that the friendly relations between Canada and the United States might be strained to the breaking point.

The American fishermen often declare that they go beyond their boundaries without knowing it, as there is nothing to show how far they can go. In such a case there night be pursuit by a Canadian cruiser, the United States vessel might be sunk and several lives might be lost and such an incident, even if it should happen that the Canadian vessel should be the victim, would have a bad effect upon the public mind, and might lead to all sorts of disagreeable consequences. Some officials in Ottawa go so far as to say that a chance shot might precipitate a war, and that it is to prevent anything of that sort that the Waterways Commission will take the matter up.

Another matter for joint action of the United States and Canada is the disposition of the line houses. These institutions create no end of trouble for the customs departments of both countries. There are thirty to forty of them on the Maine, Vermont and New York boundaries.

create no end of trouble for the customs departments of both countries. There are thirty to forty of them on the Maine. Vermont and New York boundaries. These houses have been flourishing for fity years, and it has been found impossible to crush them.

The bleg of building on the boundary line is that if a raid is made by United States officers the contraband stuff in the house can be shifted to the Canadian side, while if the Canadian poince make a raid the stuff is moved to the United States side. Therefore, the only raid that can be successful is one simultaneously from the United States and Canadian sides.

As there are none too many inspectors in either customs service, and as they have to ever a large territory, it is not often that these simultaneous raids can be made.

The houses are well known to all who have business on the borders. One very peculiar one is on the New York line at St. Regis. It is he an indian village, a ramshackle house of two stories, kept as a hotel by an Indian named Running Deer, a descendant of Deerfoot. The boundary runs diagonally through it.

The Canadian Department of Customs will suggest that the land now occupied by these stores be expropriated and that the owners given reasonable compensation for the loss of the land and the the owners given reasonable compensa-tion for the loss of the land and the building, and that in future no permit be given for houses to be built across the given for houses to be built across the boundary.

The United States customs people on the other hand suggest that the boundary in future be marked by a neutral zone and that no one be permitted to build thereon. It is a curious fact that the neighborhoods where these line houses flourish breed the best horses in Canada.

Few who read about Dan Fatch making records in Toronto the other day were aware that the family that can most be depended upon to breed horses of that type was founded in Canada, and that Dan Patch has at least one Canadian ancestor.

Patch has at least one Canadian ancestor, for he goes back to Vermont Black Hawk, a Morgan horse, the dam of which was bred in New Brunswick.

A sreat pacing family also has its origin in Canada. That is the family founded by Tom Hall.

Another horse that had a wonderful influence on turf conditions of the United States was a powerful black horse known as Pacing Pilot, which before he left Canada had done a mile under saddle in 125, a notable performance in those days. A peddier took him to New Orleans, whence he went to Kentucky. Maud S., Jay-Eye-See and Peter the Great were descendants of Pilot. e Canadian ancestor

EXPLIRIT. SPECIAL

Los Angeles, Nov. II.—The death of Doctor A. M. Westlake at the County Hospital puts beyond the probability of solution the mystery of the hidden mines which he was said to have hearded through years of economy so rigid that he justified in the minds of his acquaintances the name of miter.

It was this mystery which Doctor Westlake took with him from the County Poor Farm to the hospital several weeks ago; it was this which was said to have darkened his last days; perhaps heatened his end, though he was tottering under eighty five years.

Shortly before Doctor Westlake left the Poor Farm he became iff. It had been generally supposed by his fellows there that the doctor had considerable money, the heaf of being that he had it builed or concealed near or in the grounds.
